Funding Focus

Young parents are simultaneously faced with the developmental challenges of adolescence; the demands of parenting; and the responsibility for the cognitive, social and emotional development of a child. The most effective teen parenting programs are multi-faceted and comprehensive, addressing adolescent issues, parenting concerns and child development topics.<sup>1</sup>

Selected grantees will use evidence- or research-based methods to provide comprehensive support services to pregnant and parenting teens and young adults that will strengthen families and build protective factors to prevent child abuse and neglect.

Grantees must collaborate and coordinate with overarching county or community collaborative or advisory groups and services that focus on early childhood and child abuse and neglect prevention issues to identify needs, avoid duplication of services and assure sustainability of the services. Priority will be given to applicants that provide services in areas where no Project ELECT programs are available.

Strengthening Families: A Protective Factors Framework™

Children’s Trust Fund RFA #01-12 will focus on the prevention of child abuse and neglect by providing supportive services to pregnant and parenting teens and young adults that ultimately strengthen families through the use of five protective factors outlined in the Center for the Study of Social Policy’s Strengthening Families™ approach. Ongoing research conducted by the CSSP has shown that the presence and prominence of five protective factors in families reduces the likelihood of child abuse and neglect and contributes to excellent outcomes for young children.
